For the price I expected actual dog food recipes. There were only about 35 dog treat recipes. This cookbook contains 40, nutritious, delicious and easy to make treats for your dog. It has recipes for biscuits cookies, cakes and frostings and other treats like Frozen "Pupsicles", and Tuna Fudge. There is also an appendix that covers, "What not to feed your dog" and how to substitute ingredients to meet your dog's dietary needs. The recipes contain common ingredients, that you may already have on your shelf or in your refrigerator. The instructions can easily be followed by the novice cook. Making your own dog treats controls what ingredients are used and can save you money. Homemade treats also make wonderful gifts. You can enjoy making these treats as much as your pets will enjoy eating them.

About the Author Beth has a Professional Baker's Diploma from Sullivan University School of Culinary Arts in Louisville, KY. She has been training and showing dogs in sports, (Agility, Tracking, Obedience, Rally, Fly Ball, Lure Coursing and Barn Hunting), for almost 20 years. Over the years her dogs had various food allergies, which made her very conscious of the ingredients in the treats and foods she was feeding. Because of the limited ingredients she sometimes had to work with, she started collecting and developing recipes that would be appropriate for her dogs. This led to requests from other dog handlers for samples and recipes for her specialized treats. Thus, "The Everything Dogs Cookbook" was created. Beth enjoys baking fresh treats for her dogs as well as making and decorating doggie cakes to celebrate birthdays, holidays and success that she and her friends have when showing their dogs.
