He mostly talks about how important it is to distill products exclusively like he does because he is the matter of all things. No disrespect to the author, he is good but it comes off as a "the only right way is the old way" while shunning anything that challenges the status quo as fraudulent.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. True art!By CustomerWhat is most prominent about this document is the realisation that craft distilling is a combination of art, experience and science. Best book on the topic in . Athors I salute you! From a seasoned craft distiller in South Africa. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Interesting read but not specific on advice to the distiller who wants advice how to age alcohol flavored products

This was an interesting read with an understanding of the chemistry, but not very specific on advising how to age your spirits - probably because aging and taste are a personal preference.

The Maturation of Distilled Spirits: Vision and Patience brings the respected author's lifetime of experience to bear on the life of a well-crafted spirit. This book is about the aging of a spirit's life in a barrel. Hubert Germain-Robin details the barrel wood, where it is sourced, the chemistry exchange of wood and spirit, the environment surrounding the barrel during maturation and the intrinsic role of the maker in engaging their senses throughout the process of aging. Anyone interested in the intricacies of what makes an excellent spirit will be engaged by the multitude of factors involved in the aging process and will, no doubt, be more thoughtful when appreciating a fine spirit.
